

Mokena Board Starts War On Speeders

The Mokena village board is up in arms over the careless driving of motorcycles and automobiles on the village streets. Wolf road is being used as a speedway. The other night three autos raced side by side on Front street. This careless driving is a menace to life and limb of any child or adult crossing the streets. In order to avoid any possible serious accident due to speeding, the village board is arranging with the state highway police to patrol this section and to arrest any speeders regardless of who they are. Those seized will be taken into court and fined.

Prize Poster Wins $200 Art Scholarship For Orland Boy

The city of Chicago under the auspices of the Chicago Chamber of Commerce conducted a city wide clean-up and paint-up poster contest this spring among the high schools of the city and 250 posters were later exhibited in the Civic Opera House.

The poster which was chosen for first place, was drawn by Harold Kinney, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kinney of Orland Park who is a student of the Calumet High School.

The prize winning poster is in two shades of green on a white card board 18x24 inches entitled "Plant up, Clean up, Paint up". Water colors were used in the drawing.

Wednesday afternoon, May 23rd in the grand ball room of the Palmer House in Chicago, at a luncheon the Chamber of Commerce presented the poster prizes and Harold received as the first prize a $200 tuition course in the Ray School of Art in Chicago.

Harold is 15 years old and entered the poster contest on his own intuition, not being a member of the high school art class at the time.

His father is a member of the village board of Orland Park.

Frankfort Shows Fine Memorial Day Spirit

No finer tribute could be paid to the soldier boys of the past than was displayed by the splendid spirit of co-operation exercised by all of those who did their part in making the celebration in Frankfort such a huge success.

The young Frankfort band gave such spirit and enthusiasm to the parade and program that the older people were reminded of days gone by when the Frankfort Brass Band played such an important part in the Memorial celebration.

We must also pass on a word of appreciation commending Attorney Walter Herschbach upon the address given at the school ground, Rev. G. Gerhold for his fitting address at the cemetery and Rev. C. F. Schell-hase for the prayers offered.

In behalf of the Frankfort band and the musical organization we extend a word of thanks to every individual who contributed to the "Tag Day" fund. The amount of the fund raised was a fine expression of the spirit of giving toward making the celebration in the community what it should be.

Again the members of the band would not fail to express their appreciation to Henry Lubring and Art Geuther for furnishing their trucks for transporting the band to Mokena for the services held there in the morning.

This was a Memorial Day Celebration long to be remembered in the community and may we do our part in making the celebration of the coming years as much appreciated as this one.

Firemen and Legion To Celebrate 4th

The Tinley Park Firemen and the Tinley Park Legion Post are planning on a joint Fourth of July celebration. Further details will be given later.

Class 2—Artistic arrangement in basket, vase or bowl, for all purposes.

Section 1—Pink predominating. Section 2—Blue predominating. Section 3—Yellow predominating. Section 4—Mixed predominating. Class 3—Potted and blooming plants, ferns and fernerys.

Mitchel Brewers To Be Featured On Twin Bill

Sunday, June 10th at Hayden's Field, the people of Mokena will be able to see a twin bill, featuring the Mitchel Brewers versus the Will County Grays and in the opener the Mitchel Maniacs will tangle with the very business like married men of Mokena.

The Winners of last weeks Eighth of beer were "Happy" Cappel and George Laufer. This week the Mitchel Brewery is going to give away two eighth, one for the person who guesses the correct score of the first game and another for the lucky one who guesses the score of the Brewers and the Grays. The winners will be announced at the game and unless the winner is present the eighth will not be given to him. You may enter this contest by just going to your nearest merchant in town writing down your guess on the official card.

In the first game Lefty Hacker will twirl for the Married men while Young Mitchel will do the heaving for the Maniacs. This game, according to the dope should go to the Maniacs because of their swell battle against the Aces. However if Lefty can pitch the old base ball past their rather weak batters the married men should be able to win. It will be young Mitchel's first start since he left school last year and it is a question if he can whip them over enough to fool the married men.

The second game should be an easy one for the Brewers. Undeafated this year the boys will face a new team who have not as yet shown their teeth. Homerding or Cappel will twirl for the Brewers. This game alone should get the fans out, however the big question of whether the Maniacs are better than the married men is one question that will be answered Sunday. This will be a two game series (Best two out of three) So it will pay you to come and cheer or boo whom ever you want. There will be no restrictions placed on either. So until Sunday at 1 p. m., Adios.

Tinley Water Users Must Pay Up

At the Tinley Park village council meeting held June 4th the board of trustees passed a resolution that all delinquent water bills must be paid within 15 days or their water supply will be shut off.

Tinley Junior Garden Club

The regular meeting of the Jr. Garden Club was held at the school June 2nd. Mary Louise Correll served as president, Marion Andres, secretary and Irma Hick as treasurer.

The buds promised to keep fresh water out for our little feathered friends.

Mrs. Rogers had a short study period after which two lovely cakes were served.

Loretta Keuch and Marion Andres brought these.

The buds were also treated to an ice cream bar. Then the buds went to Mrs. Funk's basement and were given lessons and instructions for their entries for the coming flower show on June 20th.

All the buds and children are urged to display bird houses, bird feeders, soap models, posters, dish gardens and scrap books.

Buds be sure to bring all your exhibits to the school, June 20 between the hours of 8 and 8:30 a. m.

Mokena Aces Lose First Game

The Aces lost their first game on Sunday June 3rd to the Ridgewood A. C. This was a fast game with Cappel holding the boys down to 1 hit in five innings, then they started to get next to Wes's pitching and began to get some hard hits. Homerding relieved Cappel giving about 6 hits. The crowd was rather small, due to the very hot weather. The players were all doing a lot of fancy sweating and when they finished they looked like they had been swimming with their suits on. The final score of the game was 5 to 2.

The Mokena Aces will play the Will County Baseball team Sunday, June 10th at Hayden's Field, Mokena at 2:30 p. m. DST.

3,000 Baby Chicks Killed in Tinley Hatchery Fire

What might have proved a disastrous fire was nipped in the beginning by the Tinley Park Fire Department when they were called to fight a fire in the Goessel building occupied by the Tinley Park Community Hatchery, at two o'clock Saturday morning.

Walter Bruening discovered the fire when his bedroom directly over the hatchery became pretty hot and smoke began coming thru the floor. He aroused the other members of the family and a fire alarm was turned in. When the fire department arrived they found the fire between the walls and the upper floor of the building. After a hard fight the flames were put out.

The interior of the hatchery was damaged, also a part of the brooder battery was damaged and several motors were put out of commission. About 3,000 baby chicks were smothered to death by the smoke and the heat.

Some of the furniture on the upper floor occupied by the Christ Goessel family was damaged. About $500 worth of damage was done to the building. The firemen did very efficient work in saving the property from total destruction.

Crops Benefited By Heavy Showers

A heavy rain accompanied with hail and a heavy electrical thunderstorm swept this section Monday afternoon. Trees were blown down and many tree limbs were broken off. In Mokena lightning struck a barn on the George Marti place on First street. A small blaze started, but was put out with a pail of water. The fire department could not be summoned as the fire siren was out of commission due to the electric lights and power being off due to trouble on the line. The fire department was finally called, but the fire was out when they arrived. A tree back of the Beagley house on Front street in Mokena occupied by the Weaver family, was struck by lightning. A big tree in the yard of A. E. Wachter was blown down and a tree in the Barney Hostert on Niethammer street was also blown down.

Electrical service was restored in about an hour. A few hail stones also fell. At Marley the heavy downpour amounted almost to a cloudburst.

A cow on the Fred Knudson farm northeast of Mokena was killed by lightning.

Former Mokena Teacher Last Living Class Member

S. J. Eakle, former principal of the Mokena public school, now retired and residing at Polo, Illinois, lived over the days of the past last Friday evening when he was the honored guest and toast master at his alumni at Forreston, Illinois. He is the only living member of his class. He graduated from the Forreston High School 55 years ago and in 1894 he graduated from the University of Illinois with a B. S. degree. He was presented with a beautiful bouquet of hot house roses. He retired from teaching after 35 years of conservative work.

Refreshments were served in the hall.

A cash prize of $50 was awarded to Wilbur Lang.

Mokena Board Orders Trees Trimmed

The Mokena village board is asking all the property owners in the village to trim low hanging limbs of trees extending over sidewalks so that a person can walk under these branches with an umbrella which it is impossible to do now due to the low hanging branches.

CARL MAGER DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Carl Mager, life long resident of the Orland and Tinley Park section, died Sunday afternoon, June 3rd at 3 o'clock after being ill since Thursday night. He had been in poor health for several years, but was able to be up and about until last Thursday.

Carl Mager was born in Orland township, March 31st, 1865. On February 22, 1887 he was united in marriage with Miss Dorothy Paul. To this union were born six children of whom one son died in infancy.

He is survived by his widow, four sons Charles of Midlothian, Fred, Walter and William of the Tinley Park territory, one daughter, Mrs. Henrietta Schult of Blue Island; 19 grand children; two brothers, Adam and Phillip.

Funeral services were held from the late home to the Trinity Lutheran church at Bachelors Grove north of Tinley Wednesday afternoon. Rev. Wm. Greve officiated. Mrs. Wm. Greve sang. The services were in German and English. Six of the deceased's nephews served as pall bearers. The floral offerings were beautiful and profuse. Burial was made in the Bachelor Grove Lutheran cemetery.

It is estimated that about six hundred people attended the funeral services.

The deceased attained the age of 69 years, 2 months, 2 days.

"Baldy" Wins Grand Derby in Tinley Turtle Race

The novelty turtle races put on by the Tinley Park Post No. 615 of the American Legion at the Saenger Hall in Tinley Park Saturday night and Sunday afternoon and evening, was a very interesting event and drew a good crowd.

Six races with ten turtles in each race were run Saturday night and the remaining races were run Sunday afternoon. A total of 110 turtles were run. The winners of each race were entered in the grand derby by run Sunday afternoon. In this climaxing race "Baldy", the turtle entered by H. J. Strussenberg of Tinley Park won the grand prize of $15. The turtles entered in the derby were as follows: Skiney, Baldy, Painter, Patsy, Baloney, Ford Special, Service Officer, Bachelor Grove, Post 691 Member, Tinley Park.

The vaudeville show put on in connection with the races was much enjoyed. Music was furnished by Herbie Schultz and his Musical Rascals from Harvey.

Refreshments were served in the hall.

A cash prize of $50 was awarded to Wilbur Lang.

Banking by Stage Coach

A Century of Progress

At the reopened Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, the history of transportation is daily enacted in a vast open air theatre.

As you watch the thrilling repulse of the attack upon the stage coach, you are witnessing one of the episodes in the early history of banking.

Merchants did not pay out of town obligations by check; they "paid by stage coach." They hired Wells Fargo & Co., riflemen to guard huge strong boxes of gold and silver coin and bullion.

What a contrast with today, when 95 percent of all business transactions are settled swiftly and safely BY CHECK, through the inter connected facilities of more than 17,000 banks.

Tercentennial of the First Passion Play

THREE hundred years ago, in 1634, the pious peasants of Oberammergau, a little village in the Bavarian Alps of southern Germany, gave the first presentation of the Passion Play. This was in fulfillment of a vow made the previous year for relief from the plague that had devastated Europe following the Thirty Years war. For three centuries the folk of Oberammergau have kept the vow and the performance this summer marks the tercentennial of the play. Oberammergau is prepared to take care of a great throng.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

AN ALL-DAY SONGSTER

OVER in a maple tree on the edge of Farmer Brown's dooryard lived Redeye the Vireo and his little mate. Peter Rabbit knew that they had a nest there, because Jenny Wren had told him so. He would have guessed it anyway, because Redeye spent so much time in that tree. No matter what hour of the day Peter visited the Redeye was a little fellow of about the size of one of the Warblers.

Old Orchard, he heard Redeye singing over in the maple tree. He thought to himself that if song is an expression of happiness, Redeye must be the happiest of all birds.

Redeye was a little fellow of about the size of one of the Warblers and quite as modestly dressed as any of Peter's acquaintances. The crown of his head was gray with a little blackish border. Underneath he was white. For the rest, he was dressed in light olive green. The first time he came down near enough for Peter to see him well, Peter understood why he is called Redeye. His eyes were red. Yes, sir, his eyes were red, and this fact alone was enough to distinguish him from any other members of his family.

But it wasn't often that Redeye came down so near the ground that Peter could see his eyes. He preferred to spend most of his time in the tree tops, and Peter only got glimpses of him now and then. But if he didn't see him often, it was less often that he failed to hear him. "I don't see when Redeye finds time to eat," declared Peter as he listened to the seemingly unending song in the maple tree.

"Redeye believes in singing while he works," said Jenny Wren. "For my part, I should think he'd wear his throat out. Just listening to him makes my own throat sore. When other birds sing they don't do anything else, but Redeye sings all the time he is hunting."

Do YOU Know—

ing his meals, and only stops long enough to swallow a worm or a bug when he finds it. Just as soon as it is down he begins to sing again while he hunts for another. I must say for the Redeyes that they are mighty good nest builders. Have you seen their nest over in that maple tree, Peter?"

Peter shook his head. "You probably couldn't see it anyway," declared Jenny Wren. "It is high up, and those leaves are so thick that they hide it. It's a regular little basket fastened in a fork near the end of a branch, and it is woven almost as nicely as is the nest of Goldy the Oriole."

"What's it made of?" asked Peter.

"Strips of bark, plant down, spider's web, grass, and pieces of paper," replied Jenny. "That's a funny thing about Redeye—he dearly loves a piece of paper in his nest. He's as fussy about having a scrap of paper as Cressy the Flycatcher is about having a piece of snakeskin. I had just a peep into the nest a few days ago, and unless I am greatly mistaken, Sally Sly the Cowbird has greatly imposed on the Redeyes. I am certain I saw one of her eggs in their nest."

"Tell a woman she doesn't look well," says catty Katie, "and she will try a new hat before she will a doctor."

DAINTY DESSERTS

THERE is no dessert which so appeals to the appetite as ices or other frozen dishes, during the warm days. Here are half a dozen that will be appreciated by both the children and their elders:

Three Fruits Ice.

Put three cupfuls of cold water, three cupfuls of sugar and the grated rind of one orange and one lemon into a saucepan. Add one tablespoonful of gelatin dissolved in one cupful of boiling water. Simmer five minutes. Cut the pulp of three oranges, three grapefruit and three lemons into small pieces and add to the syrup when cold. Stir in the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs, freeze and serve with the meat course.

Fruit Potpourri.

Cut one and one-half cupfuls of orange into small pieces discarding all the membrane, but reserving the juice. Mix with one cupful of sliced peaches, three tablespoonfuls of pineapple juice and arrange in glasses. Add one-third of a cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of crushed pineapple, mix well and garnish with a maraschino cherry.

Banana Cream for Cake Filling. Cream one-fourth of a pound of butter, add gradually one and one-fourth cupfuls of powdered sugar and one-half cupful of banana pulp. Mix well and use as cake filling or pudding sauce for cooked rice or cottage pudding. Add any flavoring desired.

Simple Fruit Salad.

Take two cupfuls of orange sections, one-half cupful of peeled and halved grapes, two tablespoonfuls of grape juice and serve with french dressing.

Fruit Ice.

Rub three peeled bananas through a sieve, add the strained juice of three oranges and three lemons, two cupfuls of sugar, three cupfuls of water and a pinch of salt. Freeze. Add thin cream instead of the water and one will have a delightful cream.

Milk Sherbet, Three of a Kind.

Mix the juice of three oranges and three lemons with the mashed pulp of three bananas, add three cupfuls of sugar and three cupfuls each of milk and cream. Stir until the sugar is dissolved and freeze.

QUESTION BOX
By ED WYNN . . .
The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Apropos of the milk question, one thing has always bothered me. Could you possibly tell me why "cream" is always more expensive than "milk"?

Yours truly,

SUE PERRIN TENDANT.

Answer—The reason cream is more expensive than milk is simply because it is harder for the cows to sit on little bottles.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

When I was in England, last summer, I was simply fascinated by the uniformed policemen in London. What struck my fancy most were the hats they wore. Every hat I saw had a chin strap on it. What I want to know is this, do they wear those chin straps to keep their hats on?

Truly yours,

SIM PILTON.

Answer—Don't be silly, of course not. Those chin straps are for the policemen to rest their jaws on after answering foolish questions.

Wide-Ribbed Jersey

Here is an attractive suit of gray wide-ribbed jersey that will appeal to many women. The leather buttons and leash-like belt are navy blue.

In his class. The first race I put him in, he lost. Can you account for that?

Yours truly,

I. M. MORVICH.

Answer—He was out of his class.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I noticed a great number of young boys selling newspapers on the streets. One lad I saw could not have been more than ten years of age and he was carrying about fifty newspapers. Wouldn't you think they would make the poor little fellow tired?

Sincerely,

HUGH MANNY TAIRIAN.

Answer—Not necessarily. He probably doesn't read them.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

My boss is going to give me a day off next week. I would like to go some place, but I haven't any clothes to wear. What shall I do?

Truly yours,

TY PRYTER.

Answer—If you really haven't any clothes to wear, spend the day at Coney Island.

"Flipper" Likes His Milk and Water

"FLIPPER," two months old baby seal, was rescued at Long Beach, Calif., by Carl Johnson, nineteen-year-old school boy. Flipper, who was marooned on a float, climbed on Johnson's back, was safely brought to shore and after several weeks of being fed two quarts of milk every day from a bottle, has become strong and very much attached to his young master. He follows him around like a puppy and both enjoy swimming together.

Weak Stomach

PERHAPS you have a weak stomach and have tried various medicines without getting satisfactory results.

It is only natural when you have an "ache" in the stomach, heartburn, a tendency to vomit after eating, and attacks of diarrhoea that you should take "stomach" medicines.

As a matter of fact, what is called weak stomach may be due to a number of causes that have nothing to do with the stomach proper.

For instance, any poisoning in the system from bad teeth or tonsils, infected gall bladder or a sluggish intestine, can so upset the stomach that it will not do its work properly.

As you know, the majority of people who have real stomach trouble such as ulcer, have brought on that condition because of their mental make-up—nervous, irritable, excitable.

Another cause of weak stomach is an incorrect diet; that is a diet not suited in quantity or quality to the ability of the digestive tract.

Dr. F. Kraupi, Berlin, says that the whole series of symptoms of weak stomach, up to the actual formation of ulcer, could often be avoided—if the diet were always right for the stomach.

The thought then is that in all cases of weak stomach, the individual should get a complete examination by dentist and doctor and everything that may be interfering with the work of the stomach removed or corrected.

This may mean rest periods before eating, smaller meals, foods that the patient likes and that agree with him, no emotional disturbances before, at, or immediately after meals, correction of constipation, and establishment of a regular bowel movement.

It has been often noted that where test meals and X-ray examinations have been made, no deformity, delay in emptying, or other ailment was found, yet the individual suffered with a "weak stomach." By simple changing his habits, studying his diet, giving him a little change or vacation, the stomach became strong and free from any disturbances.

In other words the stomach very often is weak or feels weak because of conditions in the body or the mind instead of in the stomach itself.

Migraine or One-Sided
Headache

DESPITE all the efforts of practitioners and research men, the cause of migraine or one-sided headache has not been discovered.

You may remember that an institution, in an endeavor to investigate this ailment, advertised for sufferers to submit to treatment and were forced to turn away many hundreds, such is the number afflicted.

Drs. M. Critchley and F. R. Ferguson, London, state that migraine may be due to the liver, the eye, the food, and other causes. They believe that there are two factors entering into the cause—something already existing in the body, and something which affects this body condition.

As you know this is also the thought in epilepsy, the cause of which has not yet been discovered. In epilepsy there is a body condition, and some outside influence such as food is the match that sets off the already prepared fire.

If then migraine may be traced to the liver, to the eye, or other part of the body, or to the food eaten, then the natural method of treatment would be to try to determine which one of these may be giving the trouble in each particular case.

Thus, to investigate a case of migraine, a regular routine should be followed, which would include:

1. A careful previous history of the patient, and also his family history.

2. A physical and mental examination.

3. Careful testing for anything abnormal about the eyes.

4. An X-ray examination of lower floor of the skull, the sinuses, the gall bladder, and the intestinal tract.

5. Full examination of the fluid in the brain and spinal column, and the pressure of this fluid.

6. Examination of the blood sugar, the urine, and the alkali reserve of the blood and tissues.

7. Finding the rate at which the body processes work, or the basal metabolism as it is called.

Doctors Critchley and Ferguson state it is useless to fight off an attack and recommend retirement to a quiet darkened room as soon as possible and the use of a quieting drug.

Between attacks some patients are helped by epsom salts, special diets, and sometimes by mental treatment or suggestion.

Sufferers with migraine might well think about the above complete examination and the possibility of locating the cause of their suffering.

A Natural Compass

A beetle called the telephone is described by a bugologist, of Paris, in relating experiments with insects at the Paris museum. This little beetle, when suspended in the air, always succeeds in turning its body until it points directly north and south. No matter how much it may be turned it always adjusts itself in this manner by means of its antenna.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Flame of the Border

CHAPTER I

Lone Mesa.

The girl, clinging to the face of the weathered cliff, her booted feet barely touching the narrow ledge below, was chiefly conscious of the strain upon her wrists. All the pain in the world seemed centered there. She knew that three hundred feet of space hung blue and clear beneath her, that the azure sky cupped serenely above, and still she endured with her mouth set and her dark eyes flaming upward at the face which topped the mesa's rim.

This was a man's face, young and lean and weathered as the land about, a face wild as a hawk's, with long blue eyes that watched her painfully.

Moreover, it was a drunken face—or it had been ten minutes ago.

Now it was sobering fast, and there was sweat at its temples.

"Let go with one hand—please—an' catch th' rope," its owner begged, "for sh' love of God!"

"Leave God out of it!" the girl panted thinly. "A lot you know about him!"

"Then for your folks, miss. Haven't you got some folks somewhere who'd break their hearts if you—if you—fell?"

"Sure I have—a brother who'd kill you if he knew."

"I'd give him th' chance. Only catch th' rope. It's a little pull. I'll have you up here in a minute."

"For what?" she asked bitterly.

The man growled.

"For your life—an' your safety."

"You give me your word?"

"Yes. Will you take it?"

"I will. Swing that loop to my other shoulder. I'm left-handed."

With the expert precision of a trained cow hand the man swung the loop around her slim body. With a cat-like sweep of her left hand the girl caught it, let go the bare root of the dead pinon pine stump on the rim which had saved her, and swung clear.

Hand over hand the man raised her the scant ten feet which had separated them and pulled her over the edge of the cliff. Together they rose to their feet and stood looking into each other's eyes with tragic tenseness which precluded speech.

Then the man stooped and picked up the girl's wide hat and timidly held it out to her. She took it without a word, set it on her dark head, brushed the white, sandy silt of the cliff-face from her shirt and riding breeches, and watched him catch her horse and lead it back.

She took her rein and swung up in her saddle, her lips set in a tight line above her firm chin. In that tense silence she leaned to the start, when he caught her horse's bit.

"I—miss," he said thickly, "I want to—to say that I ain't ever felt so bad in my life. I've done a lot of things that wouldn't bear light, but nothin' so bad as this. I never made so big a mistake in judgment in all my days, an' there ain't no excuse I can offer. I just—just didn't know a woman lived who'd rather die than—than—"

"No?" said the girl like a rasp.

"You've got a lot to learn, then. Now, get out of my way."

She lifted the rein again, leaned in her saddle, and the tall black horse beneath her leaped to his stride from a standing start.

Across the high mesa she went like a streak of flame, her scarlet shirt against the blue sky making a fire in the spirit of the man who stood watching her. When he could no longer hear the sound of her horse's feet sliding in the loose stone silt he stooped and picked up his own hat. For a long time he held it in his two hands, staring at it unseeing.

Down on the sandy levels the girl gave her horse his head and sailed away toward the north and east. Two hours later she rode into the stone-flagged patio of her brother's ranch house and swung off with the last thunder of the iron-shod feet.

"That was a pretty piece of horse-manship, Sonya," said a man's voice; "quite spectacular. How long have you ridden like that?"

"Oh, hello, Rod! Why, I don't know. Ever since I've been in this country, I guess—five years now. It's a land that makes for flight and wide gestures."

"I see. You've been gone an unconscionable time. Where've you been?"

"Over beyond Chee wash. There's a sick woman in a hogan, and I'm afraid she's going to die."

A shadow passed across the girl's face, darkening it for a moment.

"These Indians are so pitiful, Rod, so patient, so hopeless. And they are so poor. They make me fairly question destiny sometimes."

"My darling! Why bother your dear head? What's one Navajo more or less?"

"I wish you wouldn't talk like that, Rod," she said earnestly. "If you knew them like I do you couldn't. They are a lost people, that I grant you, who know they are lost, and they are going down to oblivion like a gallant ship with its sails set and flags flying. You don't understand, Rod."

"No," said the man, getting up and coming toward her, "I don't. Neither do I want to. I only understand that your absurd devotion to them is keeping you from me and from your rightful place in life."

He stooped and kissed her gently.

"Go wash and rest a bit, child," he said; "you look rather fagged. Lila is in the nursery with Babs, and Serge is out on the range somewhere. Said he wouldn't be in till night."

"All right," said Sonya, "I guess

I'll take your advice. I am a little tired."

She rose and entered the deep house, a cool place, its walls laid up of flat stones chinked with adobe mud, its bare floors bright with Indian rugs.

Sonya Savarin loved her brother's house, his wife, his child, and himself best of all. For five years she had lived with them in this lone land of cactus, sand, and sunlight, and it seemed as if a hand tugged at her heart whenever she thought of leaving them.

She had thought of that gravely the last year. Of New York and Rodney Blake and all they stood for—convention and affluence and what the world called life. It had been a year, on the nineteenth of next month, since she had promised to marry him. Rod was the soul of gallantry and had made three trips to Arizona in that time, always urging her to come away with him, to give up her work, and always she had put him off a little longer. Not that she wasn't fond of him. Who could fail to be fond of him with his good looks, his smiling good-nature? And he was Serge's closest friend. Dated from college days. But how could she give up her work here among the people whom she had learned to love and who needed her and her skill so badly? Wasting herself, Rod said. If she must practice medicine, why not do it where the results were valuable, among folks who counted, where she could make a career for herself in her chosen field?

These thoughts passed through her mind as she divested herself of her dusty riding clothes and bathed in the low pool in one corner of her room where the living waters of the spring ran softly through and out under the wall in a pipe. A treasure, this indoor pool. A blessing it would be hard to leave, along with Darkness, her horse, and Lila and little Babs.

Yet she had come near as a breath to leaving them three hours back and had not given them a thought. There had been no thought in her when she flung her body out of the arms of the man who held her and over the edge of Lone Mesa—only the age-old terror of conquest, the high, fierce flare of white-hot fury at dilemma which has filled the heart of woman since creation.

She had essayed death as instinctively as she drew her breath, and had done it on the instant. The man, the tall, lean vandal of saddle and spur, who had ridden her down to the mesa's edge and lifted her bodily from Darkness' back, came back in her vision, as he had come again and again on the ride home, in the patio with Rod. She could see the long blue eyes of him, wild with inner fire under their bronze-colored lashes, and they were fierce and cruel, swift eyes that could change in a second from one vital expression to another.

She had seen them change, instantly, when she looked up after the sliding fall over the rim, the jolting catch of her clutching hands in the pinon roots. From that promising, sleepy wildness to wide shock. Had seen them literally sober themselves from half-drunken dementia to anguished sanity. Strange eyes. Beautiful, even in their beast-like cruelty. There had been no mercy for her in them. A wave of the cold terror of that moment went over her, followed instantly by a burning flush of anger.

"I'll take my pound of flesh from him for this," she told herself through tight lips, "if it takes me the rest of my natural life. If a free citizen of this country can't ride in safety I'll know the reason why."

Then she finished dressing and went out to where Lila, dark Serge's long-haired, golden wife, put the finishing touches on the table for the evening meal. They were a striking foil for each other, Sonya and her sister-in-law, one so tall and dark and vital, full-lipped, full of brow above her dusky eyes, sinuous in her movements, the other small and fragile as a flower, a fair thing to look at, to know. They were close as a hand in its glove, these two.

A tight conspiracy against the crown, Serge sometimes told them smilingly, meaning himself. But it was a conspiracy of love and loyalty and that dear service which only love engenders, and he knew it. It had served him well, for things had not been too easy on the ranch in the sagebrush country where Serge Savarin ran his flocks of sheep, and women can hold up the hands of men when the waters of circumstance become too deep. These two had waded with him, leaning in against his shoulders. Frail Lila had carried his child, too, and Sonya had stood by at its deliverance. That had been three years back, and he knew in his heart that if it hadn't been for their strong courage he'd have given up. But he had been ashamed to quit, and times were better now. The flocks had become herds. He had Indians with them in camps all over the sage.

"Hello, Sonya," said Lila. "How's Two Fingers' wife?"

"Bad," said Sonya. "I'm afraid I'm going to lose her. She's a sweet thing, too, pretty and young. Two babies. The patience of these Indians is pathetic. She whispered to me that if she had to go away, why sorrow? It was the common lot."

"Poor creature," said Lila her eyes filling. "What more can you do, dear?"

"Only a very little more. I'm going back early tomorrow and stay with her till the crisis passes."

"If she dies," said Lila, "what will become of the babies?"

"Two Fingers has a sister over in Long Ruins. Maybe she'd take them. I'd hate to see them go into the school. They're so little and so wild—like baby quail. They need a woman's love, not a routine."

Lila sighed and looked at Babs through the open door.

"This world is hard on children—and women," she said, "and only a man's true love redeems it."

"And here comes one of the crusaders now," said Sonya nodding her black head toward the northern sage. "Serge."

A pink flush spread quickly up under Lila's fair skin. Her blue eyes crinkled at the corners. Always the sound of her husband's coming brought this phenomenon of joy to sight upon her face.

A little later he came in from the back patio, scrubbed and shining, his riding clothes brushed free of the day's sand and dust, his dark face burned by sun and wind.

A handsome man was Serge Savarin, taller than Sonya, showing his Russian blood in the bold contours of his face, the fire in his black eyes, the slowness of his movements.

He kissed Lila with a long kiss, smiled at Sonya.

"Whew!" he said. "Sure is good to get home."

Rodney Blake came in, his hands in the pockets of his plus-fours.

"This is the damndest family," he complained, grinning. "Here am I, a guest under its roof, and I've twiddled my thumbs all day waiting for it to see I'm around."

"Now, Rod!" said Lila, "is that nice? Haven't Babs and I paid you all the attention possible?"

"Babs! The young autocrat! She's slept most of the time and ignored me the rest. You've done pretty well, Lila, considering the thousand things you've done today about the house, but as for these others, well, I know I should be highly affronted by their indifference. Some day I'm going to be, no kidding."

"Yeah, like I—I you will," said Serge. "Come here, Babs, and sit on daddy's lap for supper."

It was a pleasant meal that followed, and later the small group sat in the big patio watching the twilight march across the mysterious land in unspeakable beauty.

Sonya, resting her head against the long chair's back, sighed in sheer ecstasy of appreciation.

"Tired, dear?" asked Rod tenderly. Sonya moved and looked at him.

"Tired? Why, no, I'm not tired now," she said.

"Then why the sigh?"

"Oh, I don't know. Just—just drinking in—all this, I guess."

She waved her hands apart, and the gesture compassed the whole lone country with simple eloquence.

The man, smoking, watched her with speculative eyes in which there was a glint of hardness. This country and its problems—they menaced his hope, and he was beginning to hate them with a deep and abiding hatred.

Serge was talking about the bands of his sheep on Bad Land Levels, and Lila was asking this and that question at intervals, and presently Sonya, watching the great stars come out upon the blue heavens, lost the purport of their words. She was thinking of the woman in the lowly hogan beyond Chee wash, and of the dark-faced man who loved her in his silent fashion, and her heart was sad and heavy with her fear for them.

And then, superimposed upon their pathetic tragedy, she saw again the sky beyond Lone Mesa's rim and the wild fair face of a man sobering in bewilderment and anguish. She stirred in her chair, and Rod Blake touched her hand.

"Eh?" she said, startled.

CHICAGO'S 1934 FAIR BIGGER AND BETTER

Parade and Pageantry Mark Its Reopening.

Chicago.—Bigger, handsomer and in every way better than in 1933, A Century of Progress was again thrown open to the public. The formal ceremonies began with a great military parade down Michigan avenue from Ohio street to the exposition grounds, where it was reviewed at the Illinois Host house.

The parade was divided into four divisions. The first division was composed of motorcycle police, fair police, and mounted police escorting Major General of Militia Roy D. Keehn, grand marshal of the day. The Chicago Black Horse troop formed an escort for Governor Horner, Mayor Kelly, President Dawes of the fair, and other state and local dignitaries.

Military and naval units, commanded respectively by Maj. Gen. Preston Brown and Rear Admiral Wat T. Cluverius, formed the remainder of the first unit. Some 8,000 members of the armed forces of the United States were included in this unit.

The second division was composed of veterans' organizations, both American and foreign. Members of 17 organizations, all in uniform, marched in this portion of the parade.

The third division featured the queen of A Century of Progress, Lillian Anderson, selected last year in a nationwide contest. She was escorted by her court of honor and the St. John's Military academy cadets.

The fourth and concluding unit of the parade, with Maj. John D. von Holtendorff, U. S. field artillery, as grand marshal, was composed of R. O. T. C. units from Evanston and Chicago schools.

After the review the program was transferred to the Floating theater across the Avenue of Flags from the Illinois Host house. Rufus C. Dawes, president of the fair, called the meeting to order. The invocation was pronounced and the program proceeded on the following order: Ceremony of foreign flags, raising of the American flag by Mrs. Dawes, singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner," by John Pane-Gasser, and addresses by Governor Horner and Mayor Kelly.

In the evening the ceremony included the turning on of the fair lighting system and the turning on of the lagoon fountain by President and Mrs. Roosevelt through the medium of talking pictures, and a fireworks display controlled by radio from Admiral Byrd's hut in the Antarctic.

A chorus of 1,500 voices sang during the evening, and at the conclusion led the thousands of visitors in singing "America."

Corporal Osman Found Innocent of Espionage

Christobal, C. Z.—A military court acquitted Corp. Ralph Osman of Brooklyn, N. Y., at the conclusion of his second trial on a charge of espionage. The first trial had resulted in a sentence of 20 years at hard labor which was set aside by President Roosevelt. The charge against Osman was attempting to transmit secret military documents to persons said to be communists.

JESUS ON THE CROSS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 27:33-50.
GOLDEN TEXT—Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God. Hebrews 12:2.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Dying for Us.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Giving His Life for Us.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Suffering on the Cross.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Calvary.

In a real sense the grand climax of the six months' lessons is reached in this one. It is not a matter of learning the lessons taught by a great teacher, or imitating the examples of a great, good man, but of apprehending the atonement made by the world's Redeemer. He was made to be sin for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in him (II Cor. 5:21).

I. The Place of Crucifixion (vv. 33, 34).

They led him away to Golgotha, a hill north of Jerusalem, resembling a skull. He was crucified without the gate (Heb. 13:12). At first he was compelled to bear his own cross (John 19:17), but when physical weakness made it impossible for him to continue, they compelled Simon the Cyrenean to bear it for him (v. 32).

II. Gambling for the Clothes of the Lord (vv. 35, 36).

It was the custom for the soldiers who had charge of the crucifixion to receive the garments of the one crucified. We have here a fulfillment of Psalm 22:18, "They parted my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture." What sacrifice for them to gamble for his seamless robe under the very cross where he was dying. If they had but eyes to see they could have beheld a robe of righteousness being provided in his death to cover their sinful nakedness.

III. The Accusation (v. 37).

It was customary to place over the victim on the cross his name and crime. This superscription was placed over Jesus by Pilate to vex the Jews. He was their king in absolute truth. They had long looked for him and now when he had come, this is the kind of treatment they gave him. Though they rejected him and placed a crown of thorns upon his head, the throne of his father David is his by right of the unfulfilling covenant of God to David (II Sam. 7:8-10).

IV. Two Malefactors Crucified With Him (v. 38).

We are not told who they were. Perhaps they belonged to the band of Barabbas. This again was a fulfillment of the Scriptures. "He was numbered with the transgressors" (Isa. 53:12).

V. The Dying Saviour Reviled (vv. 39-44).

He was reviled by the passers-by, the chief priests, the scribes, the elders and the very malefactors who were crucified with him. In their mockery they unwittingly spoke great truths.

1. "He saved others, himself he cannot save" (v. 42). This jest was meant to show the absurdity of Jesus' claims, but it demonstrated them and showed the reason for his suffering. He could not save himself and others so he chose to give himself to save others.

2. "If he be the king of Israel let him now come down from the cross" (v. 42). His refusal to abandon the cross established his rightful claims. The devil offered him the kingdoms of the world if he would escape the cross (Matt. 4:8-10). The very fact that he did not abandon the cross proves that he was what he claimed to be, for it was upon the cross that he came.

3. "He trusted in God; let him deliver him now, if he will have him" (v. 43). His refusal to abandon the cross was to the full delight and satisfaction of God. His obedience unto death was the sacrifice which met God's full approval.

VI. The Death of Christ (vv. 45-50).

Who is sufficient to comment upon this tragedy. Let us contemplate it in adoration and wonder. So shocking was this crime that nature threw around the Son of God a shroud that the godless company could not gaze upon him. Darkness was upon the land at noonday. This darkness was the outer sign of that which hung over the Lord. He became sin for the world and the world's sin hid God's face from him. God forsook him, turned from him who had taken the sinner's place. God was dealing with sin on the innocent substitute. When the price of sin was paid he cried out with a loud voice showing that he still had vitality; that his death was not from exhaustion but by his sovereign will. He yielded up his spirit to God.

Honorable Way

We need not borrow the tools of Satan to win the victories for Jesus. Any honorable end can be reached in an honorable way. God sets no goal which has to be won by insincerity and indirection.

Where Strength Lies

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills." The vision of God unseals the lips of man. Herein lies strength for conflict with the common enemy of the praying world known as wandering thoughts.

FRIEND OR ENEMY, WIND REMAINS A MYSTERY TO MAN

Of all nature's forces the wind is perhaps the most intangible. Where it comes from and whither it goes no one knows. It can be a kindly friend or a ruthless enemy. It brings showers, clouds or sunny hours; it caresses with a delicate touch or strikes a devastating blow.

Writers of great literature have recognized the wind and its place in the scheme of things since Bible times, for we find in Genesis 3:8, "the cool of the day," margined to mean the wind of the day.

The Athenians gave names to their winds. There was Boreas, the north wind with an icy breath; Apheilotis, the wind from the east; Notos, the breath of the south, and Zephyros, the west wind. By these names the winds from the four quarters were personified, and in Athens, near the Acropolis, there is still standing a temple built 22 centuries ago known as the Tower of the Winds.

Shakespeare, who drew so largely from nature, makes more than 200 allusions to the wind in his writings. Dickens in more modern times said in one of his stories, "I am always conscious of an uncomfortable sensation now and then when the wind is blowing in the east." And George Eliot writes, "but certain winds make men's tempers bad." Emerson, the American classicist, among his numerous allusions to this force, referred to "the plous wind . . . forgetting . . . prophetic" and in other ways.

The terrible force of the wind is best described by Conrad, virile writer of the sea, in "Typhoon," when he says, "a furious gale attacks him like a personal enemy, tries to grasp his limbs, fastens on his mind, seeks to rout his very spirit out of him."

To the effects of a terrible wind in West Indies we owe the fact that Alexander Hamilton was brought into American history. Born in the little island of Nevis, a British possession in the West Indies, his youth was spent on the island of St. Croix, a Danish possession. Not yet sixteen he wrote a description of a violent wind before the terrors had worn off and while its effects were still visible. Printed in the island paper the story made such an impression upon the governor that the anonymous writer was discovered. This incident was the peg upon which his career turned.—Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch.

ORLAND PARK

The school in district 134 of which Miss Clara Myrick is the teacher had their closing exercise last Friday evening. One pupil, Max Rasmussen was graduated from 8th grade. This Tuesday they had their picnic at Swallow Cliff.

Mrs. Edgar Graves, Conservation chairman of the Federated Womens club for the 3rd district, and Mrs. Ella Loebe, President of the Orland Park Women's club will attend an Executive Board meeting in Chicago Friday.

Mrs. Ella Loebe and son Roy spent the week end in Michigan with her father and sister. This Sunday they will visit in Glen Ellyn where that city will celebrate the 100th anniversary of the founding of the community. Mrs. Loebe's father was one of the early settlers there.

Henry Bishop and Mayor Wm. Kollman drove to Champaign last week. They report a good alfalfa crop. The corn crop also is looking good, but the pasture lands are all badly burned.

Chicken thieves have made their appearance again in this vicinity. Saturday night an attempt was being made to rob the chicken house at the George Vogt place when the thieves were frightened away. The staple was pulled out of the chicken house door, but that is as far as the thieves got and thus missed a good Sunday chicken dinner.

The Orland High school teachers and students enjoyed a banquet at the Oriental Gardens in Chicago on Tuesday night. Following the banquet the group enjoyed a theatre party to the Cort theatre.

There were 34 in the party.

The Orland Park village board is to meet next Monday night.

A much needed rain fell in this section Monday afternoon. The rain will do a lot of good although it is feared the oat crop is beyond saving.

The Orland Park camp of the R. N. A., will meet at the Legion Hall on June 14th at 2 p. m. and all the members are urged to attend. The District Deputy, Mrs. Pearson is expected to be present.

During a thunderstorm Monday afternoon, lightning hit a chimney on the Charles Burkhardt dwelling.

One day last week the thermometer in the Orland school stood at 102 degrees.

The R. N. A. Juveniles held their meeting Wednesday. They have added a number of new members recently.

In place of having their annual children's day program, the Orland M. E. church will sponsor a children's festival on June 29th.

The choir of the Orland Park M. E. church will close their season on June 17th with a sacred concert under the direction of Ramon D. Girvin, a Chicago choir director. Several Chicago soloists will also appear on the program which will be printed in full in next week's paper.

The Daily Vacation Bible School will open a two week's course at the Orland Park M. E. church next Monday morning. Sessions will open at 9 a. m. each morning. Ages of the students will range from 4 to 12 years. Three teachers and three assistant teachers will be in charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter K. Smith attended the commencement exercises in the Hazel Dell School District No. 56 Tuesday evening.

A group for the study of Christian Science has recently been established in Tinley Park. Meetings are held every Sunday evening. All who are interested in Christian Science are invited. For further information write to R. W. Lyon, Tinley Park, Illinois.

Chevrolet Announces
Price Reductions

Substantial price reductions, effective June 2, on all Chevrolet passenger cars and trucks were announced today by W. E. Holler, general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company. Chevrolet now offers its lowest priced six at $492. The sweeping reduction is as much as $50 on some models. The effective price reductions on all models were made at this time in an effort to maintain, during the rest of the year, the employment figures so necessary to the general program of national recovery.

Reduction on the knee-action Master models was as high as $35 on the popular types. The sedan was reduced to $640, coach to $580, the coupe to $560 and the town sedan to $615. Prices on the newly announced Standard models placed the roadster at $465, the coupe at $485, and the coach and phaeton at $495. Reductions on truck models were equally impressive, running as high as $50.

Barriers Stop Chinch Bug Advance

Despite the feeling of some farmers barriers unquestionably will pay where the stand of corn is good and the crop is growing on strong land, according to word which Farm Adviser Braham has received from W. P. Flint, chief entomologist of the Illinois State Natural History Survey and of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. Some farmers have questioned the value of barriers because they felt that the bugs are so thick and so advanced that it was futile to attempt stopping them with barriers.

Barriers built now will protect corn against the first-brood bugs which will soon be leaving fields of destroyed barley, oats, rye and wheat to continue their destructive feeding in nearby corn fields. Later on, the second-brood bugs may destroy corn of poor stand on weak ground, even though it is protected by barriers, but these second-brood bugs will not begin appearing until about the middle of July. Furthermore, if there are good rains in July and August, bugs of the second brood will be drowned out or "muddled" in with the result that the damage from them will be reduced.

Midway Boardwalk
Opened at Fair

The Midway Boardwalk of the new World's Fair was formally opened to the public Saturday, June 2, with a program of comedy and athletic acts spotted throughout the new amusement section on North-erly Island. Twin ferris wheels, a giant conical slide and Frank Buck's Wild animal show are a few of the new features of the 1934 Midway. Television in its most advanced form is being shown at the new World's Fair in Chicago, in the first television theater ever opened to the public.

An estimated 50 miles of chinch bug barriers already have been built around their corn fields by 150 Will county farmers, and those farmers who have not done so still have time to protect their corn, according to Farm Adviser Leonard W. Braham.

MISS ELIZABETH STAMM

A JUNE BRIDE

Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Miss Elizabeth Stamm, 16 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Stamm was united in marriage to Vincent E. Frelichowski of Lemont at the St. Joseph's church in Lockport. Miss Dorothy Frelichowski, sister of the groom and Wm. Stamm brother of the bride were the attendants. The little bride was becomingly attired in a blue satin gown and carried a bouquet of roses. The bridesmaid wore a gown of orchid satin and carried roses also. Following the ceremony, the bridal party returned to the Stamm home and enjoyed a bountiful dinner. A reception and shower followed in the evening, one hundred guests being present. The bride received many beautiful and useful gifts. Dancing followed until the wee hours of the morning. Mr. and Mrs. Frelichowski will make their home in Lemont.

The Wayside Workers Circle of King's Daughters will be entertained Thursday afternoon at the home of Miss Myra Reid in Lockport.

Rev. H. R. Jay conducted services at the Homer Congregational church Sunday evening. He will hold services again on the third Sunday night of the month, June 17th. A business meeting of the Dramatic Club will follow the session.

A meeting of the Sunday school teachers and Superintendent will be held at the home of Mrs. Frank Rowley Wednesday evening.

Rev. Jay has called a business session of the Prudential Committee of the church for Monday night, June 11. He requests all members of the committee to be present.

Mrs. T. J. O'Leary has been on the sick list the past week. Her mother, Mrs. Laatz of Joliet has been caring for her.

A large crowd attended the closing day picnic of the Ross school at Highland park in Joliet, Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee White and daughters from Pryse, Ky., are visiting at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George White. The two older girls, Harriet Marcelas and Arlotte will spend several weeks with their grandparents.

Sunday evening, Gerald Hewitt conducted a very interesting session at the Christian Endeavor meeting. Officers were elected for the ensuing three months as follows:

President, June Milton; Vice President, Angelo Depra, Secretary and Treasurer, Emily Anderson; Pianist Evelyn Kopelman.

The Soltermann school held their annual picnic in the Carroll woods on Monday. Miss Anderson of Joliet will again resume her duties as teacher in September.

Ralph Waldvogel was a business visitor in Bloomington Tuesday.

Myrtle and Verna Fromka of Morgan Park spent a portion of the week at the home of their grandfather, Henry Holm, Sr.

Mr. and Mrs. George Milton, daughters June and Monna and son George left Saturday to spend a week with relatives in Kansas.

The Homer A. C. boys defeated the C. Y. O. team of Lemont on Decoration day by a score of 17 to 0. Sunday afternoon, the boys played the Lockport Blues and won by a score of 16 to 2.

Mrs. Joseph Miller and Mrs. Nevaline Hutson visited with the former's daughter, Miss Betty Miller in Willow Springs, Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Barney Welter are the proud parents of a baby girl born Friday morning June 1. Mrs. Adam Bodenschantz of Lemont is caring for the mother and babe.

Memorial Day, in the afternoon, a very interesting program was given at the Brooks cemetery, honoring the departed soldiers. Rev. Royston of the Lockport M. E. church gave the address; Miss Helen Hennebray of Lemont gave a reading; Mrs. Art Zarr of Lemont favored with two vocal solos and the following children gave recitations: Verly Reiter and Eileen Smith representing the Goodings Grove school district; Lois Jungles, the Ross district; Mary Boyce and Lucille Schwaab, the Wells Corner school; Evelyn Cutler the Hadley school and Bernice White, Ruth and Verna Carroll, the Soltermann school.

Little Lillian Love of Joliet also read. The committee in charge of the services for 1935 are: Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Woods of Lemont, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Rowley, Nettie Reed of Lemont and Julia and Edith Tilsy.

MARLEY

The people of Marley and vicinity were enabled to "see themselves as others see them" last Sunday evening when moving pictures of local people and events were displayed at the meeting of the Sunday Evening Club at the Marley church by Howard Spiess and Chas. Mack.

Among the pictures shown was a skating party at the duck pond; the Cearloss ice boat in action; a party at the Fred Lauffer home; a herd of live stock from a local farm and scenes at the Marley church of the Rev. Mr. Snodgrass and his congregation.

Miss Iva Gillette was among the guests at the Junior College banquet which was held in the dining hall of the Central Presbyterian church of Joliet last Monday evening. Miss Gillette graduated from the Junior College last Thursday evening. She has been engaged to teach the Ross school in Homer during the coming school term.

Miss Gladys Leatheman, teacher of Maple street school is moving with her parents, to the Cutler house north of Marley, which was recently vacated by the Aschenbrenner family.

Get the facts about low-cost Gas Heat!

To prove that every home can now afford to heat with gas, we'll install it at our expense
... remove it at our expense, if you don't like it.

IT'S wise to look ahead, prepare for the winter but be certain that you take the right step. Before you order fuel, it will pay you to investigate thoroughly the possibility of automatic gas heat in your home. There's no need to put up with the muss and fuss of furnace drudgery when rates for gas heat are now so low. Think of it. The cost of gas for heating is now one-half of what it was during the 1930-31 heating season.

You invest nothing for equipment And, best of all, you can try gas heat in your homewithout investing one cent for equipment. This startling trial offer is made because we have confidence in the perfection of gas heat. We know that it will bring you so much comfort, convenience and happiness that, once you have tried it, you'll never go back to the old method. 20,000 families in the Chicago area accepted our proposition and are now enjoying automatic gas heat.

Our trial proposition To prove that every home can now afford to heat with gas, we'll install it in your present furnace or boiler at our expense. You can try it one month, two months, a year. If within the first year you find you don't like gas heat, we'll remove it at our expense and replace your former heating equipment in good workmanlike order. While you are trying gas heat, you pay only $3 a month rental on the equipment in the average home, for the nine heating months. When you decide to keep gas heat, the rental you have paid applies on the purchase price of the equipment. The rental charge is included with the bill for the gas you use. When the weather is changeable, there's no fire building with gas heat. It's automatic, and a little thermostat on the wall keeps the temperature exactly as you want it. We'll gladly give you the facts on heating your home with gas, together with an estimate of the cost. Call your nearest Public Service office today.

TAKING GUESSWORK OUT OF HOUSEHOLD

The June bride and the experienced housewife alike no longer have to guess if the oven is the right temperature for biscuits, or whether the roast is getting the proper degree of heat. Accurately controlled gas cooking equipment has taken this guesswork out of the kitchen. Realizing that customers could obtain the full benefit of gas service only through properly designed gas appliances, Public Service Company established its own testing laboratory. Gas ranges, house heating equipment, gas water heaters—every make of gas appliance must pass stringent safety, efficiency and gas-saving tests before it is sold by the company.

Through this laboratory alone, Public Service Company has effected substantial gas savings for customers—and has eliminated disappointments and complaints arising from poorly designed equipment. An example again of private initiative working to build business through improved service and savings to customers.

Our Pet Peeve—

Artistic Points in Summer Home

Quaint Decoration Made of Wood Straight From Trees.

A certain crudity of decoration is needed in summer cottages which have no plaster. There are also some substantial summer houses in which simplicity is courted even to the verge of crudity. Those who enjoy summering in cottages of this sort should keep in mind the ingenious devices they have seen, for they may prove helpful. The ideas presented today are fascinating in their development and have proved practical.

To suit the decoration to the dwelling, and instill artistic touches through simplicity requires an appreciation of beauty in nature and a power to convert natural elements into ornamental accessories and furnishings. In old settler days it was by virtue of necessity that beauty was wrested from things which were at hand. Today no such necessity stalks, so it is the pleasure of exercising one's own ingenuity, or the business of the trained decorator, to devise unusual ways and means to produce these effects.

The quick eye of one trained camper discovered a good use for small bent branches. He converted them into door handles in lieu of knobs. He selected small bent branches which formed acute or right angles. The ends of each naturally bent branch he sawed so that they would fit against the door, and then he screwed the wood down to it. Some of these handles were larger than others, none of them were duplicates in shape nor had the precise angle of others. It was partly this variety which made them intriguing. All were of sufficiently smooth bark to remain in their natural state and be congenial to the hand.

Before leaving the subject of branches in decoration, let me tell you of a very old little bedside stand which I delight in. A small tree trunk forms the standard and the legs consist of four branches which all separate from this trunk at the same place. I often think of the joy with which the maker must have espied this tree with its four forking branches, or with what pleasure he watched the sapling grow until it was just the right size to be used for the tree trunk. This table was made long years ago, by Plymouth settler folk.

A modern ingenious use of white birch saplings is found in one country farm house decorated in old-time simplicity. Each window in the living and also the dining room has one straight white birch sapling for a curtain rod. The curtain rings are small cross sections of birch trees with the centers hollowed out and smoothed. The wood at the sides between the hole and the birchbark outside is painted to suit the color scheme of the room. The rings do not slide easily, to be sure, but then the quaint textile hangings are for ornament, not use, as is generally the case.

"WE PLEDGE ALLEGIANCE TO:"

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ON JUNE 14 thousands of Americans will, as a part of the annual celebration of Flag day, repeat this sentence: "I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all." It has been said that "The Pledge to the Flag" has been repeated more than any other quotation from modern literature. For that reason the man who wrote it and the circumstances under which it was written deserve to be remembered.

It is singularly appropriate that this pledge, which has been repeated so many times by so many thousands of school children, should have been written by a member of the editorial staff of the publication which for so many years was Young America's favorite magazine—the Youth's Companion. Francis M. Bellamy was his name, and at the time of his death on August 28, 1931, the memory of his greatest claim to distinction was revived by his widow who gave an interesting account of the origin of the pledge.

A little group of men, who in 1891 believed the flame of patriotism was dying out because of momentous developments in industrial and political circles, sought to "fan the spark into new life," she explained.

This effort resulted in President Benjamin Harrison proclaiming October 12, 1892, as the first national holiday in honor of the discovery of America. Delegated to write a proclamation as part of the original ceremony, Bellamy produced a 27-word pledge that stood the test of time.

"Chief among the leaders of the movement," said Mrs. Bellamy, "were President Harrison, James B. Upham, publisher; William T. Harris, federal commissioner of education; and Mr. Bellamy, a member of the editorial staff of the Youth's Companion."

"Mr. Upham conceived the idea of a revival of patriotism at a time when material things occupied the attention of most people. His first plan was to place an American flag over every schoolhouse. As a result, 25,000 flags waved on as many school buildings."

"Then the suggestion was adopted for a national holiday. Committees were formed, public men were interviewed. This handful of men virtually consecrated their lives to the task of obtaining governmental recognition of Columbus day."

"Mr. Bellamy saw congressmen, senators and others in the public eye. He interviewed President Harrison and Grover Cleveland among others."

"Afterwards he aroused interest among congressmen by inducing them to give interviews endorsing the project, to newspapers. It wasn't long before senate and house passed a joint resolution giving the President authority to proclaim the holiday, with standard exercises in public schools.

"At last everything was completed except the opening proclamation. The secretary of state asked Mr. Bellamy to do that. Mr. Bellamy nominated Mr. Upham, but the latter refused. After many long weary hours over the draft, my husband produced the pledge that has remained unchanged since then."

"And that's all," she concluded. "All except that Mr. Bellamy's health was imperiled in his work to rediscover America 400 years after Columbus landed."

Although the United States is one of the youngest members in the sisterhood of nations of the world, her flag is one of the oldest in the world. Aside from the swallow-tailed, Savoy colors of Denmark, adopted in 1219, and the flag of Switzerland, which dates from the Seventeenth century, history records no national flag with a longer continuous life than ours.

When the Second Continental congress on June 14, 1777, adopted a resolution which read: "Resolved, That the flag of the United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white, that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation," the French tri-color had not yet come into existence. The present British flag dates only from 1801. Germany changed its flag after the fall of the empire in 1918, but even the flag used during the World war was less than 50 years old.

The American flag has three symbolic names—the Stars and Stripes, the Star-Spangled Banner and Old Glory.

The name Stars and Stripes dates, of course, from its very beginning, and is based upon the description of the banner in the flag resolution of June 14, 1777.

The Star-Spangled Banner dates from the War of 1812. Orators may have called our flag by that name before that time, but it remained for Francis Scott Key, a young Maryland lawyer who was detained on a British warship during the bombardment of Fort M'Henry on the night of September 12, 1814, and who saw "by the dawn's early light" of September 13 "that our flag was still there," to express his joy in a poem which was later set to music and which took the country by storm.

The name Old Glory dates from 1831. On August 10 of that year a crowd had gathered at the wharves of Salem, Mass., to witness the departure of the brig, Charles Daggett, which was about to set out on a 'round-the-world cruise. Master of the Charles Daggett was Capt. William Driver, noted for his sturdy Americanism and his deep love for his country's flag. So his neighbors had brought him a fine American flag to be hoisted to the masthead of the brig. When the new banner had been run up in its place and rippled in the breeze in all its beauty of red and white and blue, Captain Driver, looking aloft, had a sudden inspiration. "I'll call her Old Glory, boys, Old Glory!" And thus was another symbolic name for our flag born.

Flag day has been the inspiration for a number of memorable tributes to our national banner. In a Flag day address during the World war President Wilson said: "This flag which we honor and under which we serve is the emblem of our unity, our power, our thought and purpose as a nation. . . . It is fitting that we celebrate the day of its birth; and from its birth until now it has witnessed a great history, has floated on high the symbol of great events, of a great plan of life worked out by a great people."

On Flag day in 1914, Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior in President Wilson's cabinet, speaking before employees of his department, delivered a eulogy which has become something of a classic in the literature of the flag. It is the following:

THE MAKERS OF THE FLAG

This morning, as I passed into the land office, the flag dropped me a most cordial salutation, and from its rippling folds I heard it say: "Good morning, Mr. Flag Maker."

"I beg your pardon, Old Glory," I said, "aren't you mistaken? I am not the President of the United States, nor a member of congress, nor even a general in the army. I am only a government clerk."

"I greet you again, Mr. Flag Maker," replied the gay voice; "I know you well. You are the man who worked in the swelter of yesterday straightening out the tangle of that farmer's homestead in Idaho, or perhaps you found the mistake in that Indian contract in Oklahoma, or helped to clear that patent for the hopeful inventor in New York, or pushed the opening of that new ditch in Colorado, or made that mine in Illinois more safe, or brought relief to the old soldier in Wyoming. No matter; whichever one of these beneficent individuals you may happen to be,

I give you greeting, Mr. Flag Maker."

I was about to pass on, when the flag stopped me with these words: "Yesterday the President spoke a word that made happier the future of 10,000,000 peons in Mexico; but that act looms no larger on the flag than the struggle which the boy in Georgia is making to win the corn club prize this summer."

"Yesterday we made a new law to prevent financial panics, and yesterday, maybe, a school teacher in Ohio taught his first letters to a boy who, will one day write a song that will give cheer to the millions of our race. We are all making the flag."

"But," I said impatiently, "these people were only working!"

Then came a great shout from the flag:

"The work that we do is the making of the flag."

"I am not the flag; not at all. I am but its shadow."

"I am whatever you make me; nothing more."

"I am your belief in yourself, your dream of what a people may become."

"Sometimes I am strong with pride, when men do an honest work, fitting the rails together truly."

"Sometimes I droop, for then purpose has gone from me, and cynically I play the coward."

"Sometimes I am loud, garish, and full of that ego that blasts judgment."

"But always I am all that you hope to be and have the courage to try for."

"I am the Constitution and the courts, statutes and the statute-makers, soldier and dreadnaught, drayman and street sweep, cook, counselor and clerk."

"I am the battle of yesterday and the mistake of tomorrow."

"I am the mystery of the men who do without knowing why."

"I am the clutch of an idea and the reasoned purpose of resolution."

"I am no more than what you believe me to be and I am all that you believe that I can be."

"I am what you make me; nothing more."

"I swing before your eyes as a bright gleam of color, a symbol of yourself, the pictured suggestion of that big thing which makes this nation. My stars and my stripes are your dream and your labors. They are bright with cheer, brilliant with courage, firm with faith, because you have made them so out of your hearts; for you are the makers of the flag, and it is well that you glory in the making."

We owe our official celebration of Flag day to President Woodrow Wilson. On May 13, 1916, he issued a proclamation designating June 14 of each year as Flag day, and it has been so observed since that time.

As for the honor of being the "originator" of Flag day, it would be difficult to award that title to any one person, since several Americans contributed to the idea.

One of them is a woman, Mrs. Laura B. Prisk, widely known as the "Mother of Flag day." During President Wilson's administration she was editor of the Patriotic Instructor in New York and in that publication suggested setting aside June 14 as Flag day. Her suggestion was forwarded by the Daughters of the American Revolution in New York to the President, and his proclamation of May 13, 1916, followed soon afterwards.

Another who seems to have a just claim to the title of "originator" is Benjamin Althelmer of New York. Under the title of "Flag-Day Man," the New Yorker magazine in its issue of June 14, 1930, told his story as follows:

If the lady on your left tires of your more ponderous dinner topics, you might tell her about Benjamin Althelmer. "Benjamin Althelmer," you might say, "is responsible for Flag day; did you know that?" To prove that you are not just trying to be funny, you can give her the facts about Mr. Althelmer, and how he thought up Flag day. Here they are: He is a real person, alive, and well, and lives right in old New York. Although eighty, he can still get about spryly. No one in the world gets a greater thrill out of walking up Fifth avenue on June 14 than he does. After all, he put those flags out there—yours and mine and Lord & Taylor's and everybody else's.

Mr. Althelmer thought of setting aside a special day for the Spangled Banner, back in 1910. He was on a visit to San Antonio, and he watched with sparkling eyes the flag-retreat ceremony at Fort Sam Houston one afternoon. It impressed him mightily. He was about sixty then, and a great patriot in a quiet way, a lover of the flag of the Betsy Ross tradition, of the United States of America generally (oddly enough, he was born in Germany.)

He came to America as a young man, plunged into banking and brokerage out in St. Louis and, in no time, made millions of dollars. His gratitude for the quick success that he, a foreign-born Jew, had in a strange country, took the form of philanthropy and patriotism. He gave to hospitals, founded libraries, aided government projects, financed charities, led off campaigns for the relief of victims of fire, flood, war, and unemployment. Always in his mind, however, there lurked a desire to do something for America in a big way. The incident at San Antonio was his inspiration. A great reader of our history, he knew (or if he didn't, he looked it up) that June 14 was the day on which congress accepted Betsy Ross' flag. Then, with the same spirit and gusto that had put over charitable campaigns, he started his drive to interest the nation in its flag. He began on St. Louis. He promised to give a fine flag to any institution which would formally observe Flag day on the fourteenth. The Second Presbyterian church of St. Louis was the first to respond—in 1911. Other churches, synagogues, and schools fell in line. Mr. Althelmer soon had to go into the flag-purchasing and presenting business on a big scale, with secretaries and others helping him to meet the demand. Since he was retired from banking, he could give all of his time to it. In 1912 St. Louis, as a municipality, celebrated Flag day. Flags were everywhere. All traffic stopped for a full minute at a given time. Mr. Althelmer was happy. He was happier yet when, in 1917, he got to President Wilson in person, and Flag day was made a national occasion. In 1927, the one-hundred-and-fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the flag, the United States Flag association invited Mr. Althelmer, along with Lindbergh, to attend its celebration in Washington. He couldn't go, because of illness, but the association sent him a cross of honor and a citation, signed by Coolidge, "for having planted the true appreciation of the flag in the hearts of the American people."

TRY THIS, MR. PRESIDENT

"I know how to settle this unemployment problem," said the club wag. "If we put all the men of the world on one island, and all the women on another, we'd have everybody busy in no time."

"Well, what would they be doing?"

"Why, boat-building."—Tit-Bits.

The Dessert First

"I think I'll go on a literary diet," said Mr. Primm.

"Fine," nodded Mrs. Primm. "Then you can give me the newspaper—that is, all but the editorial page, dear."

"Just a minute, just a minute," said Primm. "Wait till I finish the comics."

The Tummy Letters

The primary teacher was helping the children to tell the difference between the letters "d" and "b."

"Johnnie, how can we tell these letters apart?" asked the instructor.

"Well," answered the lad, "one has its stomach in the front and the other has it in the back."

She Knows Better

"There's really nothing wrong with you," declared the doctor, after a thorough examination.

"I'd like to see you convince my wife of that, Doc," said he. "She thinks everything is wrong with me."

NOT TAKING CHANCES

"You'll have to send for another doctor," said the one who had been called, after a glance at the patient. "Am I so ill as that?" gasped the sufferer.

"I don't just know how ill you are," replied the man of medicine; "but I know you're the lawyer who cross-examined me when I appeared as an expert witness. My conscience won't let me kill you, and I'll be hanged if I want to cure you. Good day."—Border Cities Star.

Generous Gesture

"I note that you occasionally indulge in a joke."

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum. "Even if it doesn't happen to be a very good joke, it gives my constituents the assurance that I am anxious to do what I can to make them happy."

Judge for Yourself

"How is Morton getting on with his young wife?"

"Well, a month after the wedding a belated telegram of congratulation arrived and they refused to take it in."

The Signal

"Why did you call that man a prevaricator? His reputation for truth is good."

"I wasn't expressing an opinion. I was merely employing the customary method of indicating that I was ready to fight."

COCCIDIOSIS—Continued
By C. A. McArthur

Attention has been called to the serious inroads of coccidiosis on the growing flock. Let us now discuss its after effects.

The intestines of a bird recovering is scarred. Food cannot be assimilated thru these scars and as production depends largely on the ability of the hen to digest food, a permanent cut in production is inevitable. These unused food elements passing into the lower bowels causes excess putrefaction. Excess amounts of poisonous toxins passes into the bird's system to overtax lungs, kidneys and liver, lowering vitality. Less resistance to fight off the diseases that may be in the old flock results in their perpetuation in the new flock.

Birds only partially recovering become carriers. Ostentimous paralysis develops in these carriers. In time they become light, generally develop a diarrhea and are easy victims for fowl typhoid or cholera. A skillful culler can remove a large percent of these carriers if the flock is otherwise in good condition.

Give your birds 1 pound Epsom salts to 400 pounds of birds every week or ten days until the birds are about ready to come into production.

Next week we will discuss summer pointers to flock owners.

TINLEY PARK

Mrs. Wallace B. Combs, Mrs. C. Nielsen, Mrs. Ebenhack, Mrs. Hess, Mrs. Crist and Mrs. Harcourt attended a garden tour given by the Chicago Heights Woman's Club Monday and who are a part of the Woman's Garden Dept., of the Illinois Federation. Mrs. A. Fitzner had charge of the tour. Members of the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th and 10th districts visited the gardens of Mrs. Klinger, Mrs. McClure and Mrs. Orr of Chicago Heights. A box luncheon was served at the James Burdette place. Also from Homewood were Mrs. Robt. Jacobus, Mrs. Engstrom and Mrs. Elmer Toohey. The tour was ended by a heavy rain storm.

The Tinley Park Woman's Club will hold a picnic on June 14 at Boyer's wood. Luncheon will be served at 12 noon.

Two lawn mowers have been missing from the Tinley Park cemetery since May 28. If the parties who took them will be kind enough to return them, the Ladies Aid Society of the Zion Lutheran church will greatly appreciate it.

The Tinley Park firemen held their monthly meeting Tuesday night. Following the meeting a card game was enjoyed.

The Ladies Aid of the Tinley Park M. E. church met at the home of Mrs. Henry Wyman Wednesday afternoon.

The hottest place in Tinley Park during the recent hot spell, was in the Tinley Park bakery shop where the thermometer reached 120.

Miss Ruth Funk who is taking a nurse's course in the St. Luke hospital, Chicago, spent Sunday with her parents.

The school board met Monday evening. The board has re-engaged the following teachers for the ensuing school year: Mrs. Helen Sandridge, Miss Catherine Stoll, Miss Rachel Kinman, Miss Mary Nelson and Miss Jean Morningstar. The board is considering hiring a new teacher in addition to the five mentioned.

Mrs. Frieda Holwadel and daughter Elfrieda leave June 17 on a trip to Germany. They will sail June 19 from New York on the famous liner, Europa and will arrive in Bremen June 25. They will visit with relatives at Deichhausen, near Bremen and will be away for about two months.

Mrs. Holwadel is a member of the H. B. T. club which held a farewell party Wednesday afternoon in the home of the Misses Wilke. A very cunning replica of liner Europa decorated with flags was used as a centerpiece. Nut cups in the shape of tiny boats were at each guests place.

Mrs. Holwadel was presented with a traveling kit and her little daughter was presented with a doll. The guests wished Mrs. Holwadel and daughter a pleasant and safe voyage.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to heartily thank the Tinley Park firemen for their very efficient services, in saving our place from destruction by fire last Saturday. We also thank all others who fought the fire.

LINCOLN ESTATES

A group of 21 boys and girls ranging in age from 17 to 21 years enjoyed an outing to the Lincoln Estates the past week. They played tennis, baseball, and other sports. Dancing was also enjoyed.

Wallace Peterson presented the Ann Rutledge school with a picture of Lincoln which is a companion piece to the Gettysburg address which he presented last winter.

Rose Sliuter won a cowhand scarf from Gene Autry. She composed a poem of three verses about Gene and the friends that are with him on his radio program.

James Workendyke has been spending several days at the Sliuter home.

Mr. and Mrs. Jennings have been spending a few days in Chicago.

Loretta See, Kate Goring, Marjorie Fisher and Rose Sliuter hiked to Frankfort Saturday.

Graduating exercises were held at the Ann Rutledge school Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. After a short program of music and readings, the awards were given to the children of all grades. There were thirteen spelling awards, 18 reading circle certificates and two perfect attendance awards.

The George Walker Medal was awarded to Robert Anderson, who had the highest average of the five eight grade graduates. The presentation was made by Wallace Peterson.

After a short talk by Mr. Jones, President of the board of directors, the program was concluded by the singing of "America" and "Illinois" and repeating the pledge to the flag.
